The Unseen Forces of Nature

Prof. J. Austin Larson, the Natural Magnetic Healer with offices at the National Hotel, Topeka, Kan.-a man possessed of an "unseen force"-writes ably on this subject. He shatters the fallacies of the materialist, closes the month of ignorance and discloses the truth. This article is food for thought for thinking people.

By Prof. J. Austin Larson.

Did you ever stop to think that the unseen forces of nature are the strongest forces in the universe?

I do not mean to ask you if this is true, but to ask if you have thought of this truth.

When I issue a signed statement I have something to say and an object in saying it. Some people profess to believe only in those things they can see. My object is to show the fallacy of such beliefs.

But to the subject in hand, the unseen forces are the strongest forces in the universe. We have only to stop and ponder for a mo-ment, if we give it intelligent thought to see the truth of this

You can see a living being, but who has seen life? Whence comes it? Whither does it go? Of what does the life principle consist? These questions remain unan-swered and the materialist is buffled.

A new idea has revolutionized the world, but who has seen a the world, but who has seen a thought? Will the materialist deny its existence because he cannot grasp it with his physical senses?

You stand on top of the State house and jump off. You fall to earth, Why? You say gravity causes you to fall. What is gravity? It is the force that pulls you to earth and science says if it were not for gravity you would be as likely to go up as down when launched into space. Did you ever see gravity? No, but that irresistible force is holding you to earth day and night.

A man of a materialistic turn of mind entered a large electric power house. He was very much impressed with the greatness of the force generated there. He saw great machines being run by the force passing through an insignificant wire, taking the place of many hundreds of horse power. He saw street cars scurrying hither and yonder; he saw myriads of electric lights turning night into day, but he couldn't see the force that wrought it all. Materiniist though he was, this great unseen force in its various manifestations caused him to exclaim "Wonderful!"

The sequel of the story is a contradiction to his intelligence. A few days later he met a friend who had been ill for months and in the conversation that followed he told of his visit to the power house and how it impressed him. Then suddenly he exclaimed, "Why, how well you What have you been doing for yourself?"

"I have been taking treatment of Prof. Larson," the friend replied.

"Bosh!" exclaimed the materialist. "I can't believe in that man. He doesn't give his patients any medicine. I've got to see something before it does me any good."

Just as inconsistent as a man of that calibre usually is! He saw the manifestations of the power of electricity and exclaimed, "Wonderful!" He saw the manifestations of my power to restore his sick friend to health without the use of medicine and exclaimed, "Bosh!"

This is not a mythical illustration nor a mythical man. He is a real live man, or as much alive as a man dead to the unseen forces of the universe can be, and he has plenty of company.

I treated a bright Swedish young man of Orion, Ill., a few years ago by the name of Charles Lundgrin. He was in very bad shape when he came to my institute at Galesburg. Ill., described in the single expresdown"-tornid liver constinat There is no use of enumerating any further. Anyone who has been there knows just how it is. The outcome was that Charlie got well after being at my place just five weeks. He returned home and one of the first persons he met was his old family physician, a man who had been very kind to him, a man who had collected many fees from him, a man whom he thought would be interested in his recovery. He told his story, but the physician said, "Imagination! You only think you are welling

"But, doctor," persisted the young man, "I weighed today and have gained eighteen pounds-or at least the scales 'imagined' I had." [Exit

Those who have suffered from sickness and pain know that it is real. What the sufferer wants is relief, not a theory that will try to argue him out of something that he knows he has.

My treatment is not a faith cure. I do not ask any more confidence on the part of the patient than the ordinary practitioner demands and receives. Whether I am successful or not, I am willing to leave to those who know. For that reason I court publicity, my best stock in trade. It is what I have done for others that will convince you of what I can do for you.

I have no doubt but that the question is running through your mind. "How do you cure?" That question I shall answer now briefly: I possess within myself a power to relieve pain. This I found myself able to do even before I was educated in anatomy, physiology, and manipulative treatment. I call that power the natural magnetic power, possessed in some degree by everyone and once in a while possessed in sufficient degree to make a successful healer. This power, coupled with the knowledge of how and where to apply it, is the secret of my success. No thinking man will deny a power of which he knows nothing. No thinking man will deny my power to cure disease without investigating the manifestation of that power in cured patients. But I can give an illustration of how a man will talk who doesn't think.

I was invited to a reception some two years ago in Chicago. I had gone there to have a good time and forget business. Among the guests to whom I was introduced was a man, a leader in society and very much a leader there that evening. As we shook hands he made the remark in a tone loud enough for those around to hear: "I am very glad to meet you, Prof. Larson. I have read much and heard much about you, but I tell you candidly that I do not believe in your treatment."

His remark put me on my mettle and I asked: "What do you know

"Well, not very much," he answered.

"Have you made any investigation along this line?"

"No. I can't say that I have."

"Has anyone explained to you the nature of my treatment?"

"Then you admit that you know nothing of my treatment or of my

"Y-yes, but it isn't reasonable." "Do you know what I think of a man that will condemn a thing of which, in his own confession, he knows absolutely nothing?"

No answer. "Well, my friend, I'll inform you anyhow. I think he is narrow between the ever." A laugh from the interested bystanders completed his defeat.

My plea with you is: Think for yourself. Don't mistake the blatant mouthings of ignorance for thoughts which you can safely adopt. Wisdom knows much and says little. Ignorance knows nothing and talks all Over 1,000 Deaths in Kansas During Past Year.

POINTS TO DODGE CITY

Sanatoria for consumptives are now recognized as an important factor in the treatment of the consumptive poor. Removed from homes where poverty forbids even the bare necessities of life, they are placed in an institution where they can have plenty of good nutritious food, where they are under good medical care, which is aided by nature's two great remedies for consumption, namely; fresh air and sunshine. Here they are taught how to be clean and when they return to their homes they will teach their associates how to be clean also. A list of eighty-three such institutions in the United States was recently published in The Journal of the American Medical Association. Many states already have tuberculosis sanatoria as a part of their public charities and other states will ask for appropriations from their legislature to help start the work in Kansas. Many of these sanatoria are readly nothing more than a number of tents. Such a sanatorium is called a tuberculosis camp. The tents are preferred to buildings by many who have had experience with both.

The climatic conditions of western Kansas are ideal for such a sanatorium and camp. For the past five years the mean annual temperature as reported by the weather observer at the Dodge City government station, is as follows: 189, 56.1 degrees; 190, 56.5 degrees; 190, 56.5 degrees; 190, 56.5 degrees; 190, 56.7 per cent; 190, 74 per cent; 190, 79 per cent; 190, 74 per cent.

With pure air and water, equitable temperature, floods of sunshine for the past five years is as follows: 189, 68 per cent; 190, 79 per cent; 190, 71 per cent; 190, 79 per cent;

steps necessary for its eradication, will soon become an enthusiastic worker in the campaign; for physicians are not the only ones interested in this work. Ministers, lawyers, philanthropists, and, in fact, all who are striving to make the world a better place to live in, and who have given this matter any study, are joining the ranks, and are gladly welcomed. Our greatest physicians and scientists all over the world are at the head of the movement, so the reader may be sure it is no passing fad.

Tuberculosis is not increasing. On the contrary, many authorities claim that it is already decreasing. Nevertheless, the death rate in the United States is in the neighborhood of one hundred thousand a year. Taking tuberculosis in all its forms it is responsible for one-seventh of the death in the world. There were six hundred and seventeen deaths from tuberculosis reported from sixty counties in Kansas to the state board of health during the last twelve months. These reports are far from being complete and many of the more populous counties in eastern Kansas failed to report at all. So it is safe to say over one thousand people die in Kansas every year from consumption.

Some doubting Thomas may say: "Well, I don't believe that consumption can be stamped out of existence. We have always had it and always will." To this we can reply that we used to liave wide-spread epidemics of Asiatic cholera, but it is only the offer people who can remember the last time it visited America. It will never come again. A few years ago the bubonic plague touched our shores on the west, but we kept it from gaining a foothold. These diseases are foreigners to us and will ever remain so. But in the case of tuberculosis our forefathers brought it with them when they settled America. The American Indian knew nothing of such a disease as consumption until the white man hrought it to him. By contact the Indians acquired tuberculosis and, like all wild races, they succumbed. Tuberculosis was one of the first succumbed. Tuberculosis has killed more Indians than the white man has in all his battles.

Tuberculosis is a germ disease. The germ of tuberculosis was one of the first to be discovered. Robert Koch, the eminent German bacteriologist, demonstrated it in the sputum of consumptives in 1882.

While tuberculosis is contagious, not all persons who have tuberculosis are scattering the disease. It is only when the tubercular subject has become a consumptive, that is, when the tissues of his lungs off this broken down tissue in his sputum. The microscope alone can tell just when this stage is reached.

It was easy for people to understand that smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever are contagious, but because tuberculosis did not develop from one exposure, and did not show up within a few days, they were very slow to understand it. They did not know the bacillus tuberculosis is a slow growing plant.

There is an inherent power in every living being which combats disease. This power is stronger towards certain diseases in some people than in others, it also differs in different races. A person may naturally have the power to withstand consumption. He may live in the vicinity of consumptives and never contract the disease. Then again, a person may have had this immunity, but may have lost it through prolonged illness from some other disease. This natural immunity of some people has also helped to keep the public from believing in the contagiousness of consumption. As in many other things, the public forms its opinion from a very superficial observation. On some other disease. This natural immunity of some people has also helped to keep the public from believing in the contagonal of the first and third Tuesdays up the public form believing in the contagonal observation. On the other hand, people who have believed that consumption is contagious have made that consumption is contagious have made some very grave mistakes in the past. Homeseckers Excursion.

did not wait to learn anything else about it, but immediately started a sort of reign of terror for the poor consumptive. They waged war according to rules laid down for some other contagious diseases, when, waged war according to fulley aid down for some other contagious diseases, when, as a matter of fact, consumption has an individuality in its contagiousness which is quite distinct from that of other contagious diseases.

Those who have studied the subject carefully tell us that there is no need of isolation and quarantine. This is certainly glad things for the consumptive. And if for no other reason than from a sense of gratitude to those who have delivered them, they ought to be willing to make the little self-sacrifice that is necessary to control the disease. And this is all that is necessary for them to do: Be perfectly clean; clean in regard to spitting and clean as to their hands, clothing, face, etc.

Dr. Crumbine Favors Establishment of Sanatorium,

Most Effectual Way of Combatting Consumption.

At the next session of the legislature, the Kansas state board of health will ask for an appropriation for the purpose of establishing at Dodge City, Kans., a camp for the benefit of consumptives whose homes are in Kansas. It is estimated that during the past year, upwards of 1,000 deaths from consumption occurred in the state. Six hundred and seventeen deaths were reported from 50 countles. The plans for the management of the consumptives' sanatorium have not been announced, but the institution would doubtless be managed in a similar way to the other eleemosynary institutions of the state.
